SHEPARD BROAD LAW CENTER'S CONDITIONAL ADMISSIONS

P.O. Box 1450
Alexandria, VA 22313-1450

Dear Sir:

In accordance with the duty of disclosure under 37 C.F.R. §1.56, Applicants hereby provide the following description of the Shepard Broad Law Center's (hereinafter "Law Center") conditional admission program as it operated prior to April 4, 2000 (hereinafter "Program"). The Law Center is a part of Nova Southeastern University in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Applicant Joseph D. Harbaugh has served as Dean of the Law Center since 1995.

The Program was a traditional conditional admissions program that was offered to students who applied for admission to the Law Center, but would have been waitlisted or denied admission entirely. Conditionally admitted students who participated in the Program took courses on the Law Center campus. If the conditionally admitted students were ultimately admitted to the Law Center, they received credit for the courses they completed. Because the courses were taken for credit, the courses (i) were offered over a traditional law school summer semester, i.e. 8 to 9 weeks, (ii) provided full coverage of a general subject area, e.g. agency, criminal procedure, negotiable instruments, sales, etc., and (iii) were graded on a conventional curve. The Program did not utilize calibrated grading and was only offered to students able to attend classes at the Law Center.

Under the Program, conditionally admitted students who achieved a grade of C or better in all of their courses and a cumulative G.P.A. of at least 2.5, were admitted to the Law Center. The Program was substantially similar to conditional admissions programs that have been and are used by other colleges and universities.
